Donald J. Trump: "Drug companies, which are being forced by me to substantially reduce Drug Prices, are taking $millions in ads saying I want to increase Medicare Primiums. Wrong, just the opposite! [–] GuthixIsBalance |M |H |P 10 points 19 hours ago

Drug prices have already fallen!

I have seen the success first-hand.

The prices listed for the GoodRx and RxSaver trackers. (Coupons for necessary prescription medications.)

Have both been trending downwards. Directly coinciding w/GEOTUS starting his war on these drug cabals.

This EO hasn't even gone into effect. Yet, we're already seeing a tangible market adjustment. GEOTUS has already started delivery, ahead of schedule.

Only one candidate of those listed. Has a proven track record.

Even if it's not "the perfect" in theory record. Some were hoping for. Although be honest that "perfect" 2A policy stance was a fantasy.

Law enforcement still requires the ability to effectively disarm those scum. Who are actively harming others. Instead of peacefully expressing a god given right of defense.

GEOTUS is willing to do what's necessary to actively solve problems.

Regardless if that's in a sanctuary cities restriction on a citizens 2A. And, a Sheriff's discretion on unconstitutional enforcement of laws. Or, by preventing a criminals ability to coerce and intimidate using their "acquired" arms.

Optimistic SPAC tweets on HCAC after trading? by Torlek1 [+1] in SPACs
[–] GuthixIsBalance M H 3 points 3 days ago* (last edited 3 days ago)

I was excited to see this. But, after looking into $GRAF I really doubt it.

Lidar is kind of not the future of autonomous vehicles from my understanding. Maybe it has promise, sure it does.

It would've pushed forward "alone" as integrated.

If image processing/recognition neural networks hadn't improved as much as they have. But, Tesla's system is already proven, and nobody is catching up to their datasets.

Canoo is probably going to license Tesla's system as a SaaS model. Least that's what I've always assumed was the end goal. If Canoo is the first client manufacturer to get in on, and contribute to Tesla's data. Then they'd be in a good posistion.

Idk about why $GRAF wouldn't get in on that too. So, that's a supporting argument. Maybe they'll combine capital or something?

I'm new to the concept of SPACs, so I could be entirely missing $GRAF's role in all this. They seemed to have mainly financial members on their staff listing. Many with ties to well known and established firms. So, I figure if this is true, maybe its a financial "collaboration".

Edit:

Removed misinformation towards $GRAF on engineering experience.

Serious failure on their part that the fact that the inventor of 3D Lidar in the 05' Darpa challenge. Is their Founder/Executive Chairman.

Idk why that's not way more visible on the website, as its certainly front and center on the presentation for July.

Skews the perception one gets when looking at them quickly. It definitely changes my perspective on their capability in w/engineering.

For our custom, which I played with other non-bot summoners. It auto-filled me Teemo instead of kicking us out of champ select.

This right here is one of the greatest orders GEOTUS has carried out. During the pandemic response.

Stimulating our growth and recovery. Another great deal.

Only taking a small, practically speaking, deferral in tax collection. An inconvenience we're more than positioned too utilize.

Effective, with little downside w/the time period set.

The whole point is you wouldn't be able to live on it.

If you're able too, your in a position to retire. Which in that case more power to you.

I just suspect that most are grossly overestimating the amount. And, or circumstances that you actually need to be able survive.

The 1k or so per month, proposed for direct payment to US Citizens. Is not at all sufficient enough to keep someone anywhere, but the street.

Because congress has impeeded the funding from other sources. And, many families are struggling to survive.

Considering the left's focus on impeding and hindering our efforts against Covid-19. Instead of service and results like GEOTUS.

UBI isn't supposed to be a work replacement.

Consider it a dividend paid out to shareholders (US Citizen's). Given as a part of our nation's splendor. A testament to our glory as a superpower to give our fellow countrymen another freedom.

Freedom in greater financial security, and the opportunity that provides.

This proportionally paid considering our economic situation at time of payment. Ie exactly as corporation declares, and executes a dividend payment.

Its not going to be "UBI" a fantasy replacement for work in able bodied US Citizens. It'll be a economically stimulating, capitalist solution well-suited to our republic. An investment, and a return.

+1 for JS

Way more plug and play integration. With how web/cloud centric everything is. You can use it everywhere.

JS is a good middle ground between typically "enterprise" focused languages. Where you'll need and IDE and such to utilize fully. And, Python's divergence from the mean in terms of "simplicity".

Simplistic is not the way to go to establish long term best practices. See a lot of Python's beginner tutorials.

This focus less effectively teachs Python's full potential. Least that's been my experience.

Do you have any links handy to literature (ie the research publishcation itself) you could provide?

Just curious about this topic. I assume someone like yourself is probably a good person to ask.

Users themselves are not flaired for anything, but user participation. Users cannot be flaired for reporting, content policy infringing content.

Please do not let this misunderstanding keep you from reporting rule infringing participation. We welcome all the good faith reporting we can get, to stay in line with Reddit's policies.

If you have a direct link to a comment you have made. I'm sure our mod team would be happy to help you.

However, direct appeals to our mod team would be more appropriate. Instead of commenting on ModNews. Any future replies to this would be appreciated in that format.

That isn't for targeting harrasment. While I can understand how an uninformed outsider may misinterpret it as such.

Restricting the comment spam of users participating in bad faith. Against our subreddit's, and Reddit's ruleset. Is the only purpose behind designating users by flair.

No different than the flairing of political affiliation. Common on political debate Subreddits.

That would advocate harm and violence. Violating the Reddit's policies.

If I saw that it would be referred to Admins, for further review. Can't allow threats to go unreported, in cases it could be relevant to law enforcement.

Yes, but that doesn't necessarily make it a mark for or against them.

Statements are actions in of themselves. Which can have a variety of purposes. Including influencing narrative, negotiating, and policy. Simply by remaining spoken.

This to me is a large indication of a measured and level headed character. A desirable disposition for the highest office in the land.

I care about what they're doing and going to do. Somewhat about how they go about the "doing". Not others views of the person.

Character is demonstrated with your actions. If others can only attack the intangible, then they have little substance to their claims.

This isn't the correct sub for inquiry's. Keep that in mind for future participation.

AskTrumpSupporters is a good place to go for more I'm depth answers. Many other subs dedicated to this as well.

To answer your question it should depend on where you live. Check ballotopedia for your area. They were accurate for mine last time, but ymmv.

The presidential election should have all the candidates for president. No issues even if you stay registered as a Dem. If you want access to smaller primary's and such. You probably need to change registration.

Edit: Locking due to aforementioned rule violation.

The Pharma corps are already behind him. Any that are foolish enough to think otherwise. Have at least just been put on notice.

Any competent C level pharmaceutical exec knows not to try anything. Not during Covid.

Your a girl and your attacker was a girl? Or your a guy and your attacker was a girl?

Either way I definitely could see how much they must've resisted you. That's absolutely fucked up, especially considering your massive amount of evidence.

But, I'd have expected nothing less really. The system is broken and unless your a certain "type" of person. Who can meet criteria to become a media darling (ie become a threat). Then you're largely ignored by the system as a whole. If not outright targeted by the system itself.

[–] GuthixIsBalance M H 2 points 2 months ago

My friends have been renting movies on Amazon then sharing screens. Everyone is in a call together, even while physically apart. Basically the new blockbuster rental model.

Cheaper and far more efficient for one person to rent the movie. Stream to the group, while each member watches within their respective home. Getting drunk off their asses collectively over a call together.

You can't do that at most theaters without getting thrown out. There's a market for this among the youngest generation. And, it's only going to increase in size over time.

There could be issues with dust. But, the degradation of the contacts is well documented.

They absolutely knew about this, Nintendo simply wrote it off as a cost. Must be saving enough to make all these RMA's worth it in the long run.

We live in a fucking monopoly game by stahl085 in wallstreetbets
[–] GuthixIsBalance 1 point 3 months ago

There isn't that much in the bank. 4 players clear $800 per turn cycle.

This without pulling anything else, through special event type cards, etc. It's really easy to clean out the bank.

Your either playing with competent opponents (to maintain a close game). Or your all really really bad.

It's simple to clean out the bank on gaining a huge lead. Especially if playing with enough players, to draw the max per cycle from the bank. One player can become the bank itself.

From the few Google images I've seen she looks like a fully grown big tittied character. Maybe she's petite, but she doesn't seem to be depicted as a child.

Is there any comparison between her and Kanna, besides there height?

40% move speed on call buff for 10 min. That's incredibly useful.

I purchase those movement speed pots. Every time I see them in someone's shop. I might buy this bus just for that buff alone.

[–] GuthixIsBalance [M] [H] 1 point 4 months ago

If you want Trump ads and are fine with something unconventional. Sign up for texts through Trump's website.

You'll get some fairly decent "ads" based on current happenings. They've got a good team in charge of that from my experience.

Support only for US Citizens. No green card recipients, no illegals, no-one else at all.

If you immigrate here, even if you become a US citizen. You still shouldn't be able to get it. However, your children, children's children, etc. All should qualify.

It should be an incentive for someone capable, and willing to sacrifice everything for themselves. For a guarantee for the future of their US citizen born descendents.

No dual citizenship holder's either. You must renounce your other possible alignments permanently.

No exceptions to the above policies either. That way mass immigration cannot, least not easily, immigrate solely for their own personal gain.

[–] GuthixIsBalance 2 points 5 months ago

I've had the same happen to me, but on the receiving end. Multiple clips of shit tier pistol ammo dumped into me while I was prone.

Far more common than you'd think on factory. If I come in as PMC with decent armor, full durability, etc.

These scav spawned ammos can't break my armor with multiple clips of direct hits. Let alone penetrate, or keep from ricocheting off entirely.

I literally fall asleep in raids all the time (I have narcolepsy).

I'm in a situation every factory run. Where a player scav can run up right next to me. Empty a clip or two, immediately waking me up. Allowing me to whip around, one-shotting them with my high ergo Mosin/SKS.

Hell if I can one-shot a kitted PMC with my Mosin. I can reliably respond in kind and then some with player scavs.

You don't have to be a Nazi. Adhere to its tenets. Praise its fuhuer in passing greeting. Nor seek its false Ubermensch "utopia". To be a Nazi collaborator.

Collaborators were those in relationships of convenience with the occupying regime. Self-interest is a collaborators game. This including the all incentivizing prize of self-preservation.

Justifications abound, a collaborator doesn't cease to collaborate. Because history inconveniences one's morals after the fact. Neither do gains made during the period of collaboration. Suddenly reverse into losses.

Soros did what he did. He's given reasoning for it. And most don't, nay, shouldn't place any more blame on him. Than that he clearly places on himself.

He wasn't a Nazi in 1944 in occupied Budapest. Any more than he isn't today. An ideological shift won't wash Soros clean. As it, never, influenced his collaboration. Self-interest and self-interest alone drove his hands. Ideology wasn't participant.

He confirms his willing participation himself. He wasn't dragged along at gunpoint.

He was there partly to reinforce his own cover. Assisting in his guardian's duties, furthering his own self-preservation.

Which is always going to be a light in this dark time for Soros. Some good was done whilst bringing harm through his actions. Its admirable for a child to do what he could given his circumstances.

However, Soros wasn't doing anything out of duty. He wasn't a resistance member fighting from within. He was a collaborator out of choice, self-preservation... Ie self-interest.

I'm not decrying what he did too help. But, it cannot be said a few lights in his darkness. That he himself furthered, absolves him of wrongdoings. He isn't innocent in action not at 14 years old. Not by any means.

I'm not decrying his actions by any means. It was war after all, and he did not personally have much of an impact.

However, it's just as true that as Soros made little a mark himself. Neither can it be stated he had no impact on his people's genocide.

He himself clearly expressing remorse over this fact. In most publications /interviews that I've seen.

He did point in fact assist the Nazis in their occupation of Budapest. Whether done so out of self preservation is irrelevant.

Many collaborators say the same thing. Tell the same, truthful story, about their actions during the war. What they had to do to survive, how far they had to stoop. Just to be able to tell that story at all.

Their underlying justification doesn't rewrite their actions. Or their status as collaborators. Nor does it absolve Soros of his contribution to the holocaust.

Blitz is fairly easy to deal with.

In laning phase the only threat he provides is to my adc. Long as you can find an experienced adc who knows how to dodge a hook. You should have little trouble with dankcrank.

I still permaban blitz in soloq. But, only for my adc's sake.

Janna.

Now as an enchanter her skillcap is extremely high. She's not someone who you can just jump into and wreck lane.

Enchanters have always been the top tier supports. So, if you're serious about the role. I'd say learn which of them you like. Then stick with them, experience is the best teacher in their case.

He's basically been "draining the swamp" not by direct action. But, by his general policy stances, and attitude alone.

With Trump the good ole boys club knows it cannot just get away with anything. He's not apart of their club. Ergo he neuters their effectiveness.

Even if Trump doesn't directly haul in the corrupt DC federal elite. He has practically speaking ended careers of egregious offenders. By simply sending out a few tweets. Shining a spotlight on darker swampland that the elite would rather be left to obscurity.

TIL For generations Doctors figured the appendix had no function. But recently it is determined it "acts as a good safe house for bacteria". Sometimes bacteria in the intestines die or are purged. The appendix's job is to reboot the digestive system in that case. by lopezjessy in todayilearned
[–] GuthixIsBalance M H 1 point 6 months ago

Probably could argue that it was a necessity. Considering the overall goal was the surgery's success.

Say it was in the way. Ie a risk to the patient to attempt to go around the organ surgically. Or that it would've been irresponsible to salvage the appendix.

Not as if the doctor amputated an appendage during an ovarian surgery. There would be clear harm there. Easy to prove malpractice in such an instance.

Not so much if a patient is simply upset. With a removal that's likely part and parcel to the surgery's success.

Kids get shot, stabbed, beat in some of our "public" schools.

Many don't want more money to be spent on proven failed schools. Known for letting kids get killed. Instead of actually safely educating them.

Considering the worst offenders, ie schools themselves. Are where the money is spent. Exorbitant amounts far in excess of other developed nations mind you...

Most other nations have no idea just how bad the state of lower/elementary, middle, and high school is in the United States.

Here is some information on DMCA.

Apparently you file a counter claim. Then if it's un-contested within 14 days or so. It's automatically enabled, or won.

No idea who we contact to counter claim in our case. Maybe Reddit?

In United States? No because it's not illegal.

It's hard to even prosecute criminal syndicates here. Advertising literally illegal operations with RICO statues. (Think the mob.)

Other countries? Idk many don't have such inherent freedom of speech. I could see it being illegal... in China for example.

When you can outlaw possession of any information. It becomes easier to throw political prisoners away. Same as its easy to go after someone for this. After you make it illegal of course.

I kinda doubt Reddit could be held responsible ever. So long as their American and it's not explicitly illegal here.

It's up to them, and maybe the US government. If they care to respect another nation's copyright laws.

That's interesting to note. I doubt that will hold up in the United States.

We kinda tend to not care about what the world thinks. Concerning their interpretation of law. When it suits us.

I could see the EU and such actually respecting this view though. Since they seem to care about this type of thing. But not the US government.

DCMA is typically not allowed to be used like that in the US either.

If they're not careful they could really run into some shit with the Feds over this. Especially if they are foreign companies abusing this.

Marching orders are not kind to this shit right now. If they accidentally DCMA someone/something that they shouldn't have.

Right now if it's just us, basically hobbyists, with no skin in the game. Nobody will care.

Honestly we don't even care. We simply post the same things somewhere else. Quick to move forward unimpeded.

However, misuse like this will ensure future mistakes. Possibly against a real entity with some bite. Ie an American media company with potential license.

Especially see this happening if it's a foreign entity. B/c American media companies usually know better than to illegally DCMA. Social media posts on the largest Western forum.

Book sales.

They don't even start getting royalties.

So if something takes off, and they sell 1 million units+. Then they start really raking it in if they get 3-5% or something like that. Otherwise they'll be lucky to get a dime more than their publisher's upfront investment.

If you want to support your favorite creators. You have to but from them and them alone. That is how we support the author's in the Anime/Manga community.

It's just how this industry is structured. Even the biggest authors rarely see a dime in online manga reading royalties. Online readership is cheap, effective, crowdsourced advertising. The money is all made at the point of sale of the upmarked physical goods.

The only barrier is legislation. For non-specialized trucking.

We've already got AI that can sit in traffic and go basically straight. Even in adverse, wind/rain/sleet/hail/dust, weather conditions.

Humans really are un-necessary, even a burden. Considering the alternative doesn't need rest. Doesn't need a fancy long haul trucking cabin to sleep in, eat-in, etc.

If all you do is cross country long hauling, with cookie-cutter loads. You're going to be replaced in the next 5 years. Possibly by market forces alone.

The legislation will finalize this process in 10 years+. As AI continues to highlight the health and safety risks. Present today, documented and well known in the field. With human operators driving these insane trips.

Now, anything specialized is a completely different story. Computers are good at what they can be programmed to do, generalized tasks within a system.

The specialized transportation industry will likely never be automated. Maybe you'll have assistive AI and such to cut down on required personnel. Increase your margins and safety coefficients.

So, if you work in this niche part of trucking, rejoice! Your life will get easier and you won't be out of a job. Its everyone else that's screwed.

Yes, and many of our most successful dollar to dollar gov efforts. Are in fact the definition of socialist programs.

See:

Creation of the interstate highway systems

Planning/building/distribution of electrical grid to rural zones

Regulations on food safety

Economics of scale are a true force if implementation is sound.

If we manage policies successfully, and are selective in investment. We can reap rewards greater together than alone.

"Socialist" programs reaping gains on investment. Is simply good business.

Nobody ever proved we can't all win. Together, and at the expense of no one man. Everyone can gain, but not all gain equally.

"Socialist" programs aren't an issue with NN's. Socialism as an ideology is the issue.

[–] GuthixIsBalance |M |H 0 points 10 months ago

Absolutely. Pence is great I love the guy, really. But, he's unsuitable to hold the highest office.

I don't want a true radical in any way. No matter how slightly or broadly defined that radicalization extends. To hold our presidency.

Its never been a good idea in the majority of circumstances. Barring wartime to have a ruler maintain unshakeable positions. That consistency can be key, but now isn't the time.

Pence is a great choice for his current role. He as VP doesn't overshadow Trump in negotiations/representations of our nation. He doesn't conflict, nor vie for control/political power. Whilst still remaining a solid unquestionably steadfast official. Nobody can utilize him to undermine our national position.

Pence is a solid political object. The ball stops at Trump so to speak, because of Pence.

While I don't agree with all of Yang's positions/solutions. Nor do I believe many are practical in current form. I wholeheartedly agree with solving problems with actual solutions.

It's not just all "free college" nonsense with him. It's elimination of the welfare industrial complex + increased accessibility to said welfare.

I'd never vote against Trump if he's alive, and running. As his business expertise is irreplaceable.

It's a huge issue that the EU and US will have to face. China's basically colonizing many African nations.

Setting up Chinese industry, importing Chinese workers, and walling off their claimed "leased" land. With Chinese military "contractors" ie the PRC Army.

China's assuming control of major naval ports in poor African nations. After funding the construction. They bleed the country for cash until it defaults on its "loans". Then they "lease" the land for an almost indefinite time period. To be "repayed".

China is already at war, a global financial war of colonization and domination. Against the most vulnerable nations. And it's a no contest fight for sure.

Soon China will control half the major naval shipping lanes. From the Indian ocean to the coasts of Africa. It's going to become a huge issue for global trade.

All that matters is to keep on living. When the journey ends, regardless of your final destination, you'll have traveled there all the same.

If living life when you're long in years and short on time. Happens to "cost" a timely death, you're in good shape.

My grandparents are in the same boat as you. One passing a few months back. However, only after living the final decades. Within a few months of death still refusing to relinquish hobbies, ie 40 hrs of hardcore golf a week.

Yes, living when your not supposed too has high costs elsewhere. However, waiting to die never having lived is much worse.

You likely know this, but I'll say it anyway. The example your setting, living disrespective of the end will be meaningful to your grandchildren. It was for myself, and its been the same in similar circumstances w/peers. Least go knowing you've set a good example to aspire towards.

I can't speak for ya'll, and it might be the company I keep. But, I've been playing video games with hardcore gamer girls since I started playing online at all.

I always assumed the "girls don't play video games" was just a relic of the, very distant, past. A meme that's joked about, but never actually manifesting.

I can't recall a single instance of this in all the years I've been playing League, COD, various MMOs.

Video games have been mainstream my entire life, there wasn't a time it was "counter-culture". Irrespective to gender, you were ostracized as a kid if you "weren't allowed to play" by your parents. Let alone the fallback from deciding not to participate yourself. Because of some notion its for "boys".

You're my parent's age at least, myself around your children's age. Therefore, I don't understand my parents perspective any more than yours.

I can only say your son represents my generation's standard for reactions. Not the exception.

Playing OG Nier right after Automata I could see the gameplay influences even w/a decade b/w the series's release. OG Nier had an insane amount of gameplay innovations in it. How gameplay was handled spatially, considering its release date. Was nothing short of incredible.

Nier's still a clusterfuck/technical mess. With flaws so glaring they're endearing... But, it's likely one of the best releases I've played from that era.

I'd definitely recommend it to anyone who's a fan of the recent Nier: Automata. A different less polished experience, sure, but still a worthy and memorable one.

Considering the almost daily 100+ degree heat index, $50 to get a kid to do even a fraction of the work. Even at a fraction of the quality that the pros put out. Seems more like the customer is fleecing the kid.

That's false. Don't parrot their marketing bullshit. They already walked back on that track years ago.

The methodology behind its "less addictiveness" conclusions was flawed. Everyone who reads it can see they went looking for an answer and found it.

Its a stimulant, it promotes wakefulness. Modafinil/Provigil are both weak stimulants. Just because they're ineffective, ie weaker than alternatives in their target patients. Ie Narcoleptics.

Doesn't mean they aren't addictive with regular abuse, in otherwise healthy subjects. Same as any stimulant is.

If you are going to abuse something, fine whatever. But, don't go around spinning nonsense like denying its addictiveness. Some idiot will come by and use it as validation for taking 1000mg. Least be informed with your abuse striving not to misinform others.

Depends on how wealthy the environment is. My area is heavily Catholic/Christian. We don't get rid of "mistakes".

Got peers I graduated w/who've had kids. Being likely a few years younger than yourself.

The area is far and above the wealthiest around, though. Not anything to scoff at and un-exceptional by national standards. Just isn't an economically depressed drug den. Ie with meth heads running around dying in the streets.

Rate of education is high. Everyone's got at least a high school degree. Large percentage have higher than that.

All really impacts how a pregnancy is handled. Children are owned up too, not cast aside. I've seen peers take responsibility, with most having married.

Everyone's working multiple jobs, sure. Going to school/taking care of the kids. Just unheard of for anyone to be the alternative. Irresponsibly having kids young? Definitely. Irresponsible at life? Nah, not at all.

[–] GuthixIsBalance M H -1 points 11 months ago

A degree isn't everything, and it is absolutely not a sign of intelligence. Its supposed be an indication of knowledge gained. Reinforced by industry, and associated university peer accreditation, maintaining its value.

This isn't the case everywhere. Ie in the third world, and now more or less defunct 1st world, degree mills. You could/can buy any degree you desire. With no effort, or so little maintain any worth.

Not just in a shady backstreet office, but from what would be an otherwise accredited "state" institution.

You can be far more intelligent than your average college grad, even in the states. Excel greater elsewhere than the halls of academia. Taking an alternative path to success by foregoing traditional higher education.

Doing so in the field, or under an apprenticeship. Gaining knowledge instead through military training, technical training/certification, etc.

A route, dated learning method common throughout all of US schooling through university. Can be an awful environment for some to gain/retain any knowledge. It's not exactly a secret on how poor school systems are here.

Some of us here might value something we can inherently excel at, as its ideal for us. That doesn't make the elite's, us, and our ideal environment valuable even in a general sense for everyone else. Because by all means the university system of academia was created by the intellectual elite, for the intellectual elite's niche scientific/cultural pursuits.

Not as a way to educate the masses. Yet, were still teaching students to go to college "or else". Not encouraging anything remotely efficient/valuable to students who clearly have no business in higher education.

Standards/entry requirements are lower than ever. Large debt is easy to push onto eager young students, good business for all other parties, sans-themselves. Not many have an issue with lower standards if the check clears.

Having multiple generations in almost lifetime levels of debt. Has had an effect on our economy. Families starting later, or not at all, similar w/homeownership/entrepreneurship.

I don't personally support widespread higher education for this alone. Standards should be drastically raised, and unfailingly enforced nationwide. To receive any federal funding or accreditation. Same standards should be imposed with federally backed student loans.

Only the actually best and brightest should be allowed either of these. Within reason, of course. Which I'd say is at minimum 1/3 of the applications. If 55 % of test-takers can get a 21 on the ACT. With this high enough for some university bachelors degree programs? That's too low for basic entry requirements.

Half of the population never be entering college, that's not academia's purpose. We don't need 1/2 the population to be educated to this formal extent. It's inefficient and with the current college debt crisis practically extortion. I don't even know if you can properly speak English reading/writing fluently with sub-20s scores in English.

I knew 1st generation immigrants who struggled greatly on that section. Achieved those range of scores. Who also had extremely high math scores the upper 20s/lower 20s etc.

How is someone not on such an elite level otherwise going to succeed in basic coursework? How can they be expected to write a paper or basic dissertation? There's no way someone can do that poorly and still be actually ready for higher education. Maybe some other education as a stepping stone, but not jumping right into academia.

That's why college in its current iteration has extremely low expected value to myself and many others. Especially the fiscally conservative traditional republican base.

No less impresive a feat of peak performance. Requiring an inhuman level of obedience from troops.

Poor command over the unprofessional/uneducated/undrilled peasants. Basically made true professional armies impossible in those times.

Discipline needed to carry that load. Knowing anyone of failing brings everyone down. That's true Spartan level training.

These Viking were no jokes. They were hardcore as hell.

Maybe, not the same Spartan level of inhuman discipline. Gained through the dystopic killing of their children. Allowing only the worthy to live, and serve. As Sparta famously practiced.

Still an insane feat.

That's because t_d is supposed to be a solely supportive sub. Dedicated wholely to the current admin alone.

It's not a discussion forum or general political sub. For even typical conservative-leaning GOP politics.

The policy is to remove anything non-supportive, least anything glaring. Its a hive-mind created, with purpose. Adhering to this militantly.

T_d just isn't a typical large sub with a general focus like /r/pcgaming. It's closer to a small niche sub regarding content. Differentiated only in size, ie default subreddit level users/traffic volume.

I understand your joking and its clearly a tongue-in-cheek reference. So this isn't so much for you, specifically. Just that a lot of users don't understand t_d's purpose, nor why its moderated like it is. So, I'm just making note.

In recent years Windows 10 has moved towards open-ended practices. Supporting open-source in about every way they can. Courting the future "industry" level software market. With w/the engineers directly.

Microsoft may have pulled shenanigans with the Xbox One. The pathetic announcement/launch. However, since that fuck-up. Post previous failures of Windows 8 and mobile/non-desktop dev. They've gotten their shit together.

Microsoft is imo one of the main figures working against a future "dystopian" market. For all software, not just gaming/entertainment.

It's in their interest to ensure no real competition, ie Amazon or China. Controls the future engineering landscape.

There's no way they are going to change direction towards retail. Even if they corner the gaming/entertainment market... The gains won't be worth losing their shirts. Sinking the company for certain this time with another Windows 8 disaster.

The last thing Microsoft wants is a Chinese competitor to create a homegrown OS. As a response to shortsighted aggression in gaming/entertainment.

China up and deciding to go it alone, just to forego Microsoft. Dooms Windows everywhere, least of all internationally. Longterm sinking the company.

If your a big business and you decide to fuck Microsoft. Just pirate 1000+ copies of Enterprise. Your going to have a very bad time the second they find out your using their shit unliscensed.

Same with seeds. Monsanto developa seeds like software. Your paying to license them for single use, or timed according to their terms etc.

Their not really evil though. Unethical and passably corrupt. Yeah, sure. Especially with their predatory sales practices. I could get behind trust busting their monopoly the fuck up.

But, if a giant farming corp "forgets" to re-license the seed for their next harvest. After buying single harvestable genetically superior seeds/crops. Consequences are on them there's no excuse for that.

Limited time usage of the seed. Is factored into gains of usage. Ie w/growing, harvesting, resilience to disease, output, etc.

The drastic evolution in Monsanto's seeds over base nature. Didn't happen overnight, it's engineered. That investment has to be recompensed.

Don't want too as a farmer? Then, don't sign with the devil (Monsanto), won't have to pay his prices.

DBZ really isn't and hasn't been super popular for a decade. It was more or less before my time. Same can be said for the rest of my generation. (Gen Z)

Were we alive? Some possibly for localizations. Personally, I wasn't for the ending of Dragon Ball Z's original airing. Which was just shy of a year and a half before I was born.

Even if any of my peers were alive. No question everyone was far too young to participate in the real hype and community. Surrounding initial air/localizations.

I've definitely seen the show in its entirety and the main protagonists are iconic in popular culture. But... it's a very long marathon of a property to complete. That I don't honestly believe aged very well.

It's a tall task to ask even hardcore fans on a sub like this to watch all of original DB/DBZ. Flaws existing in its decades-long runtime makes it a monster of an undertaking. Too much really even considering its status and influence.

Easier to go through other acclaimed masterpiece level property's. Ie Bebop b/c of concision and consistent quality over total run.

I wouldn't recommend Dragon Ball to a new anime watcher. As when I've been asked for advice w/One Piece. Similar issues, same response.

Dragon Ball is an undertaking really reserved for the hardest weebs. Weebs who can overlook production flaws. Aware of anime production and historical technical/broadcasting limitations.

FYI, on broadcasting, I hadn't realized myself until I looked at mal writing this comment.

It's been 20 years since it originally aired. Surprising since it feels the property was prominent when I was very little. Before I knew what "anime" was I'd definitely have associated DB, at the least Goku with the medium.

Although, within peers, Dragon Ball was far overshadowed by Naruto and One Piece. And, personally, I wasn't a real fan myself then, or now. However, for Dragon Ball to be a rememberable influence in someone who wasn't even born when it ended. Really show's how much of a titan it was. Kinda wish I could've seen that myself, must have been wild to actually have lived it.

LSD? Yes, the restrictions are there to protect US. It's too potent.

Last thing you want is it to return to it's former obscurity, and abuse. Christ man it was used to torture individuals during questionable "interrogation" in the 70s. We don't want to go back to that.

Sure you might be able to get through it fine... but LSD is not fucking weed. It should be continued to be treated like fentanyl. Legitimate medical usage in extremely rare cases. Otherwise remaining outright banned and inaccessable.
